

‘Rivers Of Blood’ coming true by Richard Edmonds

Fifty years ago today, 20th. April 1968, the true and brave Enoch Powell, Member of Parliament for Wolverhampton South West, stood up and spoke for Britain and warned the nation:

“We must be mad, literally mad to be letting such vast numbers of Third-worlders pour into Britain. The nation is piling up its own funeral-pyre.” Powell, the former university professor of Classics, quoted the Roman poet, Virgil, “Like the Roman I see ’ the River Tiber foaming with much blood.”

Powell's speech electrified the nation and totally divided it. On the one side millions of patriotic, responsible Britons recognised instantly the truth of Powell's warning, and on the opposing side was the heartless political Establishment, who then and now hold the British people in contempt. Powell, the champion of the British people, was thrown into the political wilderness.

Powell gave his warning that Rivers of Blood would flow. And we witness now, fifty years later, the rivers of our people's blood flowing: here are some of the victims of the multi-racial, multi-criminal nightmare that has been forced onto us by the wicked and heartless establishment:

The list of victims includes these youngsters:

Richard Everitt, aged 16, stabbed to death by Asians in North London;
Ross Parker, aged 17, stabbed to death by Asians in Peterborough;
Kris Donnal, aged 15, kidnapped, tortured to death by Asians in Glasgow;
Christina Edkins, a school girl aged 15, murdered by an African on a bus in central Birmingham;

Aaron Dugmore, a school boy aged 9 who hanged himself, “bullied to death for being white”, the Sun newspaper;

Daniel Moore, aged 12, severely beaten by Asians but survived, Hounslow, West London;

Danny O'Shea, aged 18, stabbed to death by a gang in Canning Town, East London;

David Ross, aged 16, killed by a drunken Asian motorist, Northumberland;

Daniel Higgins, aged 18, murdered by Asians in Slough, Berkshire;

Terry Gregory, aged 19, stabbed to death in Woolwich, South East London;

Billy Gregory, brother of the above, stabbed to death in a separate incident;

The headmaster, Mr. Lawrence, stabbed to death in North London in his own school by one of the pupils, an immigrant youth from the Philippines.

Drummer Lee Rigby, savagely done to death by two Africans in Woolwich, South London.

People talk about “racism” and race-hate, well they usually don't know what they are talking about. When the British Empire was closed down at the end of the Second World War and British soldiers, policemen, judges and jailers evacuated India, and British Law and Order was no longer present to keep the peace, then massive inter-communal strife broke out and a million natives were murdered as Hindus slaughtered Muslims, and Muslims slaughtered Hindus.

Powell had served as a British officer in India during the War and he had witnessed the bloody mayhem. When the debate took place in the Westminster Parliament on the state of Race relations in Britain following the 1985 Tottenham, North London, riots in which a Police office, P.C. Keith Blakelock, was hacked to death by a mob of black savages, then every MP present wondered what Powell would now say. Enoch Powell rose from his seat, looked around at the assembled parliamentarians and said, “You've seen nothing yet”, and sat down.

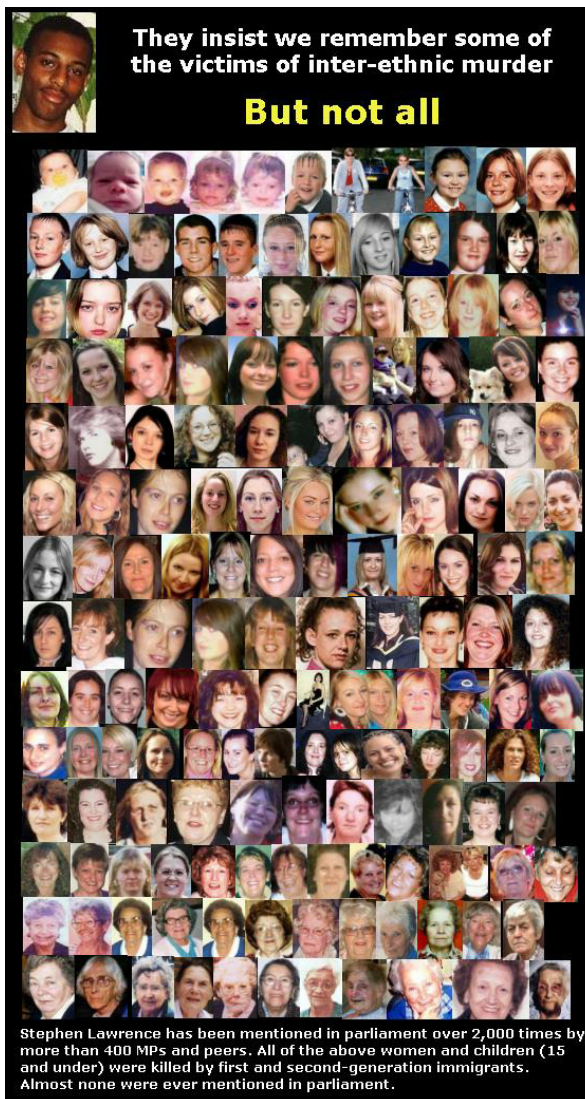

We remember and we mourn the victims of Islamist terrorists' multiple bombing of buses and trains of the London transport system, July 2005, in which 52 passengers were killed and hundreds injured

And we remember and we mourn the victims of the Islamist terrorist bombing, May 2017, of the pop concert at the Manchester Arena which cost 22 young people including seven children their lives, and which left many dreadfully injured;

March 2017, an Islamist terrorist deliberately drove his car onto the pavement on Westminster Bridge, right beside the Houses of Parliament, leaving five crushed to death and dozens seriously injured; June 2017, seven were killed and many injured on London Bridge when Islamist terrorists again deliberately drove a vehicle into crowds of young people. Rivers of Blood.

And we mourn the old folk, victims of the multi-racial, multi-criminal nightmare forced onto us:

WHY ARE WE SO BLIND? (Or how to upset everyone without really trying) by Edmond Morrison

I recently read a telling article on the Heritage and Destiny website which after reviewing the wasteland that British Nationalism constitutes today, came to the conclusion that NO current political party existed with even the remotest chance of achieving any forward momentum and concluded that the scene seems to be currently a collection of cranks, nihilists and hopelessly naive individuals who are 'waiting for something to turn up'

I couldn't agree more!

There exists a few damp remnants of once effective and promising organisations- the BNP and the NF being the main two.

Both are indulging this May in the annual display of political emasculation that the disastrous votes both parties achieve will give joy to the likes of "Hope Not Hate" and bring even further depression to those last few of us who are keeping the Flame alive in the hope of better days.

Neither the NF nor the BNP has any chance whatsoever in doing anything in the foreseeable future other than to maintain a veneer of political existence.

Add to these the inconsequential BDP and other odds and ends and the Wasteland is still a barren and blasted heath.

I suppose it's tactful of me to add that all these groups have some good people in them but as to why they continue to exist is beyond my unquite mind.

I fail also to see exactly what British Movement exists for? I fail to see what the fancy dress antics of the New British Union actually accomplish. I viewed one of their 'days of action' YouTube videos recently which consisted of a few random shots of some NBU stickers daringly displayed plus a rather murky series of shots of a NBU member tearing up a Red poster and jumping on it. Strong stuff indeed!

I question the continuing existence of the British Democratic Party which it's Chairman recently described to me as 'still-born'. Why does it keep going?

The lesbian Anne Marie Walters who describes herself as a 'gay rights activist' failing to take the leadership of UKIP has teamed up with that political chancer 'Tommy Robinson' to form a 'For Britain Party'. This, she and Tommy Yardley Lennox Robinson describe as 'anti-racist; anti-fascist; pro-Zionist party'. (Shudder!)

It has one platform - it is anti-Muslim and, er, that's it.

Pin not your hopes on this collection of misfits!

Is there any group I haven't attacked yet? Apologies if I've missed you out but I'll email Joe Owens immediately whom I'm sure can provide me with more Aunt Sallys.

There is one organisation however that actually IS accomplishing something and this is the Nationalist Forum Network. Starting as the London Forum it has now established Forums in the South West, Yorkshire and I believe the North West.

A lot of this is a result of the incredibly hard work of Jez Turner. The Forums are without doubt a beacon of light in a darkling world.

My own current political activity consists of writing articles; keeping up a considerable daily correspondence with White Nationalists from many countries and of course producing WHITE VOICE .

I'm not fooling myself into thinking that White Voice is a growing Juggernaut with immense potential - the reverse is the case.

With a few notable exceptions, I am met with emails of gloom; snide comments but generally a deafening silence!

A few who share my vision do and are sending in constructive and readable articles (there are some in this issue), but to the PDF editions I laboriously work on and send out in their many hundreds- the response is basically non-existent.

I am taken to task for spelling mistakes in a few of the rare responses yet the last three folk who volunteered to proof read White Voice have all gone incommunicado. So I have to proof it myself. Its NOT a good idea as you become 'word blind' reading your own writings.

IS IT ME?

Now I know - and am the very first to acknowledge that I have a checkered past', in that I have founded over the course of five decades, various new political groups and have been accused of being a splitter. According to the Chairman of the current NF this has resulted in my being banned from ever having NF membership again.

In the words of Catherine Tate 'Am I bovvered?'

Nope not in the least.

Let's take a look at three organisations I, along with others have founded. The British National Party (1970's edition); the National Action Party and the White Nationalist Party.

These were formed because of INTENSE FRUSTRATION with the amateurism of the political groups I left to do so.

The BNP because the NF was in 1974 taken over by anti-White Nationalist populists; the BNP (1980s) because of again it's lack of appreciation and dynamism in moving forward in that decade- out of this the National Action Party was born.

Thirdly, in 2002, the White Nationalist Party (originally intended to be a movement which I hoped John Tyndall would lead), but which was actually during it's short existence was a powerhouse of activism and dynamism (as was the NAP) came into being.

We returned to the BNP and the NF mainly because although the NAP and the WNP had activist cores which blew all other groups out of the water, our people were young, often unemployed and we forever operated on a shoe string. At a time when my political 'notoriety' prevented me from working in my profession (I am a qualified Travel Consultant with three languages and a whole bunch a professional diplomas), I was forced to take temporary and badly paid jobs whilst at the same time bringing up a family and contributing most of my meagre funds to the Movement.

I have regrets that the NAP and the WNP had to be wound up, as today either of them would soon populate that Wasteland but I am 69 this July (should the Old Gods spare me) and I have heart disease too, which is incredibly tiring.

My hope that 2017 would see the rebirth of the WNP which both former members and the new wave of young activists were urging me to do, was scuttled by the desertion in the lowest way possible of the WNP former National Secretary who had all the membership files; the London BM Box and still had the WNP bank account. That, together with his possession of the vital printing machinery meant the reconnaissance of the WNP was 99% reliant on his commitment and moral fibre. He jumped ship having neither of these two things. It was a hard and very personal blow.

The one organisation I know now (isn't hindsight great?), I should have kept going was the second BNP (1974 - 1978). Started in Leeds with a small core of ex-NF members devastated by the take over of the Populists, grew quickly and soon had units all over Yorkshire, London, Leicester, the South Coast and especially Lancashire where it seemed a new unit was being formed every week as the Movement established itself in the mill towns of the Colne Valley with strong units also in Manchester and Liverpool.

I mistakenly took my people (scores of them) back into the NF as I saw that 78 - 79 was going to need everything being pushed behind the Front. The NF collapsed in a welter of acrimony and the much better organised BNP was no more. If only! I believe today most strongly that the second BNP would in the 80's have become the Number One movement and who knows where it would have been today?

CAVEAT

I do not wish any one individual to take personal offence from this article but as my consistent appeals to introduce a sane model of what we are doing, sending out for instance detailed proposals for the establishment of a new force to break our impasse, the response has been next to nil. A year or so back, Andrew Brons asked for such proposals to be submitted to him.

I spent the best part of a week putting a three page thesis together and I submitted it.

I never got either an acknowledgement nor a reply. (To be fair Andrew did publish a lengthy article in H&D, but a simple acknowledgement would have been nice...)

I am minded of the short poem by Emily Dickinson in her 'Letter to the World'

This is my letter to the World

That never wrote to Me—

The simple News that Nature told—

With tender Majesty

Her Message is committed

To Hands I cannot see—

For love of Her—Sweet—countrymen—

Judge tenderly—of Me

Forgive me, this has been a long but necessary Editorial. I'll finish on my strenuous efforts over the last two years or so to lay the foundations- along with other prominent White Nationalists to set out a blueprint as to how a new Movement should be structured and how given some iron resolve and the sacrifice of personal ego to the unchangeable goal of preventing the genocide of the Aryan People, such a new, professional, disciplined and highly centralised organisation could be established that, marching in connection with our White Brothers and Sisters in Europe, Great Britain, Europe, the USA, Canada (shed tears for what Canada has become), White Africa, Russia (especially Russia!), where Putin continues to defy the Globalists; White South America and Australasia we can establish and rekindle THE WILL TO WIN!

Organisation- a clear strategy and dynamic tactics are the ANSWER and NOT the pointless quest for destructive Sacred Cows of Democracy (and what exactly is "Democracy"?) and Respectability - ever the lock stifling real progress. ORGANISATION AND A CLEAR STRATEGY ABOVE ALL THINGS

In the middle of the Spanish Civil War, the Communist Reds were dragging out a young Falangist to be shot at dawn.

As the Communist butchers prepared to fire - he looked towards his fellow Falangists looking through their cell windows, tears in their eyes and with his dying breath he cried "Do not weep for me Comrades ! Organise!"

In 1986, Kenneth Erskine, known to the Police as the Stockwell strangler, was arrested and charged with murder. Kenneth Erskine murdered defenceless old folk living alone. Erskine's reign of terror took place in Stockwell, South London, just across the river Thames from the Houses of Parliament. He was found guilty of the murder of seven old age pensioners, but the Police have reason to believe that he had murdered dozens more....Yes, dozens more, you read that right. Erskine's technique was to strangle his victim, men and women and then to bugger them, before or after death. Erskine, a West Indian, may be Britain's most prolific murderer. Never heard of him ? News-media did not give the case enough publicity ? Maybe because Erskine was black and his victims White.

A crime-wave without precedent has been let loose on the British people. The inner areas of our major cities have been turned into permanent crime and riot zones, where nobody feels safe and where nobody would want to live or raise a family. Rivers of Blood.

And let us not forget the horror that was inflicted by the West Indian, Delroy Grant, on vulnerable, respectable old folk living on their own in Bromley and Croydon, South London. Delroy Grant, known to the Police as the Night-Stalker, raped hundreds of elderly women and men (Yes, elderly men were raped by this beast) for twenty long years before the Police put a stop to his reign of terror and depravity. News-media did not give this case much publicity ? Maybe because Delroy Grant was black and his victims White.

And let us not forget the thousands of children, White, under-age English girls raped and sold into prostitution by the vile criminal Asian grooming-gangs. The vile Asian criminals were enabled by the Authorities to carry out their rapes of English children for years on end, right across the North of England with complete impunity. The Authorities knew all about their crimes and for years made no attempt to stop them.

The list of the victims does not end with this record: Let us remember the victims of the past and now let us mourn the future victims, because the Authorities are making no attempt to control the criminals that they have let loose upon us. On the contrary their open-door immigration policy of inviting the whole world into our country ensures that more muggers, murderers, rapists, terrorists, child-rapists will enter Britain, so the list of the victims of the multi-racial, multi-criminal nightmare will grow ever longer, and the Rivers of the blood of our people will continue to flow, just as Powell warned.

A brief note on the consequences of Powell's apocalyptic warning. The reaction of the political establishment was not slow in coming: the Labour MP and government minister, Tony Benn, claimed that "Powell was on the road that leads to Auschwitz". Said in 1968.

I was 25 years of age at the time and my mind ever since has been focused on the double aspects of mass-Immigration and the truth about Auschwitz and the so-called "Holocaust".

Lighten Up!

Politicians are a bit like restless sleepers.

First they lie on one side, and then on the other.

An MP, a clergyman, and a Boy Scout were passengers in a small plane that developed engine trouble. The pilot announced, "We'll have to bail out. Unfortunately, there are only three parachutes. I have a wife and seven small children. My family needs me. I'm taking one of the parachutes and jumping out!" And he jumped. Then the Senator said, "I am the smartest politician in the world. The country needs me I'm taking one of the parachutes." And he jumped. The clergyman said to the Boy Scout, "I've had a good life and yours is still ahead of you. You take the last parachute." The youth shrugged and said, "Don't need to. There are two parachutes left. The smartest politician in the world just jumped with my knapsack!"

Golda says, "Do you have any idea what this herpes is, and can he catch it?"

Ruth replies, "No, but I am just so thrilled to hear about Irving's engagement - it's time he settled down.

As far as the herpes goes ...who knows?"

"Well," says Golda, "I have a very good medical dictionary at home. I'll look it up and call you."

So Golda goes home, looks it up, and calls Ruth. "Ruth, I found it. Not to worry. It says herpes is a disease of the gentiles."

Dump Zuckerberg - Shut down Facebook!

Since Facebook and Zuckerberg's platform back Big Government, the national illegal NSA domestic spying program, and big corporation motives, most grass roots companies, natural medicine news, and news about President Donald J. Trump are now distorted, edited out, or simply blocked and blacklisted by Facebook. Zuckerberg is just another Globalist who believes in controlling the people and bankrolling off their ignorance. A hacker and idea thief from the beginning, Zuckerberg's morals and ethics leave much to be desired for a business person of such extreme wealth. Hiding behind the guise of philanthropy, Zuckerberg and his wife the Asian, Priscilla Chan (actively promoting miscegenation), claim they are "advancing human potential and promoting equality" while promoting domestic violence, fake "tolerance" platforms, race-baiting, extreme left-wing propaganda and lies about President Trump, and continuing to collect data on the private lives and buying habits of Americans and people world-wide.

Zuckerberg has been known to drop hints of his left-wing ideologies in his posts, speeches and even Facebook likes. With control of the largest social network ever created at his finger tips, he has the ability to censor opinions, control a narrative and even influence elections.

Dangerous is putting it mildly!!!

Why is Modern Art so Bad?

For two millennia, great artists set the standard for beauty. Now those standards are gone.

"The Mona Lisa"....."The Pieta..." "The Girl with a Pearl Earring." For a score of centuries, artists enriched Western society with their works of astonishing beauty. "The Night Watch"....."The Thinker"....."The Rocky Mountains." Master after master, from Leonardo, to Rembrandt, to Bierstadt, produced works that inspired, uplifted, and deepened us. And they did this by demanding of themselves the highest standards of excellence, improving upon the work of each previous generation of masters, and continuing to aspire to the highest quality attainable.

But something happened on the way to the 20th Century. The profound, the inspiring and the beautiful were replaced by the new, the different, and the ugly. Today the silly, the pointless, and the purely offensive are held up as the best of modern art.

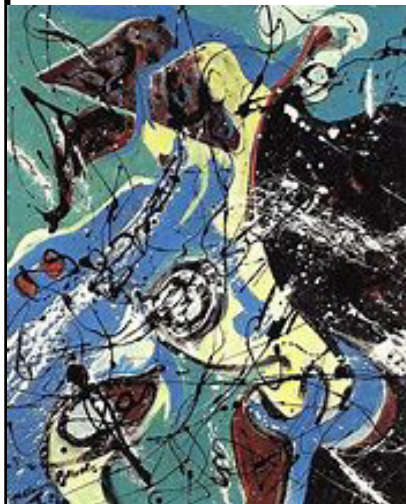

Michelangelo carved his "David" out of a rock. The Los Angeles County Museum of Art just offers us a rock, — a rock — all 340 tons of it. That's how far standards have fallen. How did this happen? How did the thousand-year ascent towards artistic perfection and excellence die out?

It didn't. It was pushed out. Beginning in the late 19th century, a group dubbed The Impressionists rebelled against the French Académie des Beaux Arts and its demand for classical standards. Whatever their intentions, the new modernists sowed the seeds of aesthetic relativism — the "beauty is in the eye of the beholder" mentality.

Today everybody loves the Impressionists. And, as with most revolutions, the first generation or so produced work of genuine merit. Monet, Renoir, and Degas still maintained elements of disciplined design and execution, but with each new generation standards declined until there were no standards. All that was left was personal expression.

The art historian Jacob Rosenberg wrote that quality in art "is not merely a matter of personal opinion but to a high degree . . . objectively traceable." But the idea of a universal standard of quality in art is now usually met with strong resistance if not open ridicule.

"How can art be objectively measured?" We are challenged. In responding, we can simply point to the artistic results produced by universal standards compared to what is produced by relativism. The former gave the world "The Birth of Venus" and "The Dying Gaul," while the latter has given us "The Holy Virgin Mary," fashioned with cow dung and pornographic images, and "Petra," the prize-winning sculpture of a policewoman squatting and urinating — complete with a puddle of synthetic urine.

Jackson Pollock painting -garbage as fraudulent 'art'

Without aesthetic standards we have no way to determine quality or inferiority. Here's a test once given to graduate art students, all talented and well educated. "Please analyse this Jackson Pollock painting and explain why it is good." It is only after they give very eloquent answers that the lecturer informed them that the painting was actually a close up of his studio apron. He didn't blame them; he said he would probably have done the same since it's nearly impossible to differentiate between the two.

"And who will determine quality?" is another challenge we are given. If we are to be intellectually honest, we all know of situations where professional expertise is acknowledged and depended upon. Take figure skating in the Olympics, where artistic excellence is judged by experts in the field. Surely we would flinch at the contestant who indiscriminately threw himself across the ice and demanded that his routine be accepted as being as worthy of value as that of the most disciplined skater.

Not only has the quality of art diminished, but also the subject matter has gone from the transcendent to the trashy. Where once artists applied their talents to scenes of substance and integrity from history, literature, religion, mythology, etc., many of today's artists merely use their art to make statements, often for nothing more than shock value. Artists of the past also made statements at times, but never at the expense of the visual excellence of their work.

It's not only artists who are at fault; it is equally the fault of the so-called art community: the museum heads, gallery owners, and the critics who encourage and financially enable the production of this rubbish. It is they who champion graffiti and call it genius, promote the scatological and call it meaningful. It is they who, in reality, are the naked emperors of art, for who else would spend $10 million dollars on a rock and think it is art.

But why do we have to be victims of all this bad taste? We don't.

By the art we patronize at museums or purchase at galleries, we can make our opinions not only known but felt. An art gallery, after all, is a business like any other. If the product doesn't sell, it won't be made. We can also support organizations like The Art Renewal Center that work to restore objective standards to the art world. And we can advocate the teaching of classical art appreciation in our schools.

Let's celebrate what we know is good art and ignore what we know is not!

The Futility of Electioneering by Max Musson

Among the various Nationalist groups in Britain, there are those who have turned away from electioneering as the means by which they hope to bring about political change and the salvation of our people. These groups have come to realise that the majority of the electorate are so mentally conditioned by our corrupt mass media that they are incapable of exercising their right to vote in a rational way. Furthermore, these groups have come to realise that the electoral system in this country is deliberately administered in such a sloppy manner as to facilitate widespread electoral corruption on the part of our corrupt political establishment. That electoral corruption being used as a second line of defence aimed at preventing any non-establishment political parties from ever achieving political power.

When Nationalist political parties contest elections, they are grossly unfairly demonised by the media and portrayed as being composed of hateful individuals who are alleged to have psychopathic tendencies and who intend if they ever acquire power supposedly aim to commit genocide as a result of an alleged irrational hatred of minority groups.

"It's not who votes that counts.
It's who counts the votes."

*—apocryphally attributed to Iosif Vissarionovich Stalin,
Soviet revolutionary, political leader, party animal and all-

In reality however, Nationalists are driven by precisely the same concerns and desires as the majority of the British people and if only the public would exercise more effort to get to know the candidates standing in elections, they would realise that nationalists are not a threat at all, want only what is best for our people and merely wish to put the interests of our people first, ahead of the minority groups to whom establishment politicians continually pander.

Virtually every time there is an election the bulk of the public are duped into once again voting for either of the two main establishment parties, either because they are daft enough to think that despite all of the evidence these parties do actually care about us, or that by voting for the least worst of the two, they are at least securing government by the lesser of two evils.

Time and time again in this way, 'Tweedle-Dee' is elected to government in place of the out-going and discredited 'Tweedle-Dum', by a public who don't seem to remember that five years previously, it was 'Tweedle-Dum' that was elected to replace the out-going and discredited 'Tweedle-Dee'. The public don't seem to realise that the policies pursued by both 'Tweedle-Dee' and 'Tweedle-Dum' are in effect identical, with only cosmetic differences, and that logically they should be looking for a new political party to vote for in preference to the two main parties that have had so many chances, so many terms in office, and who have been utterly discredited every time.

As already stated, the establishment parties have as an additional line of defence, their ability to fiddle election results because of the sloppy way elections are administered. So sloppily are they administered that it would be possible with relatively limited resources, for the incumbent political party in government to gerrymander election results on substantial scale without anyone outside of a relatively small conspiratorial group knowing. By this means it has been possible for the establishment political parties to prevent any non-establishment parties from winning sufficient elections to gain even a toe-hold on political power. Occasionally, a Nationalist political party despite all the odds, has managed to get a handful of candidates elected in locations scattered across the country, where those isolated individuals have then faced systematic exclusion by the elected representatives of the establishment parties, thereby denying them any influence over government policy either nationally or locally.

After more than a century of trying to gain political power through the ballot box, in which more than forty different Nationalist political parties have tried every permutation possible in presenting our policies and who have either suffered a 'news black-out' in which they have been completely ignored by the media, almost as if they had never existed, or who have suffered a withering hail of lies, abuse, smears and denigration by that same media, such that we have never had more than sixty local councillors elected at any one time and never more than three candidates elected at a higher level, it is time for us to realise that until the balance of power in Britain is changed by some other means, there will for us be no electoral route to power.

If we are to acquire the political power needed to prevent being dispossessed and race replaced, by the traitors at Westminster, we must concentrate our efforts elsewhere and pursue a non-electoral strategy designed to change the balance of power by other means. Once we have achieved this, once we have 'levelled the playing field' somewhat, we will have the influence needed to pressure the establishment into conducting elections fairly, or at least more fairly, and in this way, electioneering may once again become a viable route to power.

For now however, electioneering is a futile waste of time and resources, falsely raising hopes among the more naïve among us, only so those hopes can be cruelly dashed, and wasting both time and resources that we cannot afford to lose.

That 'Good Friday' Sell - Out is destroying Ulster!

(from our Ulster Correspondent)

Since our last issue, the political elite have been celebrating the Good Friday Agreement's 20th anniversary, whilst the framework of local government has been collapsed by Sinn Fein and the EU now makes territorially claim on NI, I take a caustic look at the GFA and how it has benefited the Ulster people.

That handshake of defeat

the equalitarianism genocidal agenda.

From a racial nationalist perspective the GFA has been disastrous in that the mono racial Ulster of 1998 has been transformed in a very real, very noticeable and arguably, very dangerous manner. The imaginary "peace dividend" sold by carpet bagging politicians was in fact the green light for immigrants and immigration as the demands of a low wage economy demanded the expansion of its labour pool and the cultural Marxists seen an untapped voting constituency as thousands poured in from Africa, Asia, Latin America/Europe, as well as economic mercenaries from the former Soviet Union.

First it was a few streets, then a few districts, to an extent now that there are geographical areas of the Province given over to what amounts to an alien invasion, the spirit of political correctness which now predominates in local politics prevents anyone from speaking out, yes, there are the mutterings of discontent as our health, educational and social services are stretched to capacity to accommodate these often grasping and ungrateful vagabonds.

Politically Sinn Fein has gained from the influx, whilst other political parties vary from cold to luke-warm about continuing immigration, the Republican Movement have been the foremost champion of enforced multi-culturalism whilst sadly a unionism conscious of the demographic and political changes threatening the unity of the U.K. has been loathe to identify that those new neighbours could just be the tipping point in constituencies where our indigenous peoples were formally 50/50, a least one council seat which I'm aware of was with the help of resident EU nationals.

Crime, drugs, prostitution, halal and mosques, all things which we warned about are part and parcel of society, with urban towns and cities now resembling the transit camps of Romania and Bulgaria no wonder that the EU, Sinn Fein and the Irish govt., headed by a gay Indian, want to retain NI in a "special union" which would in effect remain an open door into the UK where immigration could continue unrestricted and unconstrained., essentially this would be a serious threat to both Brexit as well as Ulster's constitutional position, that the DUP, representing their electorate are retaking strong principle on the issue has raised the concern of an international conglomerate of politicians known as "the elders"!!!

That our enemies seek to not only divide Ulster from the rest of the UK but utilise its territory as a spear in the side of Britain is a mistake, clearly they are unaware of both our heritage and a spirit which from the very earliest Cruthlinic inhabitants defied enemies more powerful than their numbers.

It is a mistake to write us off, we will determine our own fate and the dictates of Globalist politicians, and cultural Marxism or imported proxies will neither enslave our land nor poison our DNA.

The faces of the new 'Ulster folk' - Roma

"Lamh Derg Abu!"

Dear Editor,

If I make a vanilla statement such as "To me, the sky looks blue.", and you are offended by that statement, am I wrong on any level? Or are you wrong for taking offense at that innocuous statement?

Censorship in any form is an anathema to learning. Here in Europe, there are many "Hate Speech" Laws. These laws have their place, but like any "slippery slope", once you start the slide, it is almost impossible to stop from sliding into Orwellian Censorship.

Most laws have, as a key component, "Intent." What did the "perpetrator" intend to do with his speech? If his intent was to slander, impugn, harm and offend, then he is opening himself up to many different remedies, either in law or equity. Some of them are draconian!

For illustration, I offer you the following scenario: A person is killed by the actions of another. Is it murder? Justifiable homicide? Negligent homicide (sometimes called "Manslaughter"), Simply an accident? Circumstances and intent are everything. The result is still the same. A person is dead at the hands of another. Horrific on any level, yet the circumstances and intent of the perpetrator mean either the perpetrator walks free, exonerated completely, a life sentence in prison, or something in between.

Unfortunately, we seem to be getting away from the 'circumstances and intent' standards, and sliding into the "feelings of the (sometimes unintended) observer". Which means it doesn't matter what the circumstances and intent are, if you are offended, then a "crime" has been committed...

Listen Up! This is a disaster on so many levels! "Thought Police" and massive censorship is the eventual result!

If you are offended by what is said, even if you were not the intended target, speak up, by all means. Remember, though, your response may mean that you will offend someone else who innocently overhears your response to being offended... and so on, and so on, and so on... See where this leads?

My advice? Don't be a snowflake! Toughen up! Shrug it off! Man up! (Sorry if that offends you Feminist, but the metaphor doesn't translate well into a female-centric point of view. Besides, you know what the metaphor means, so lighten up already!).

See how far we have already fallen???

Dear Sir,

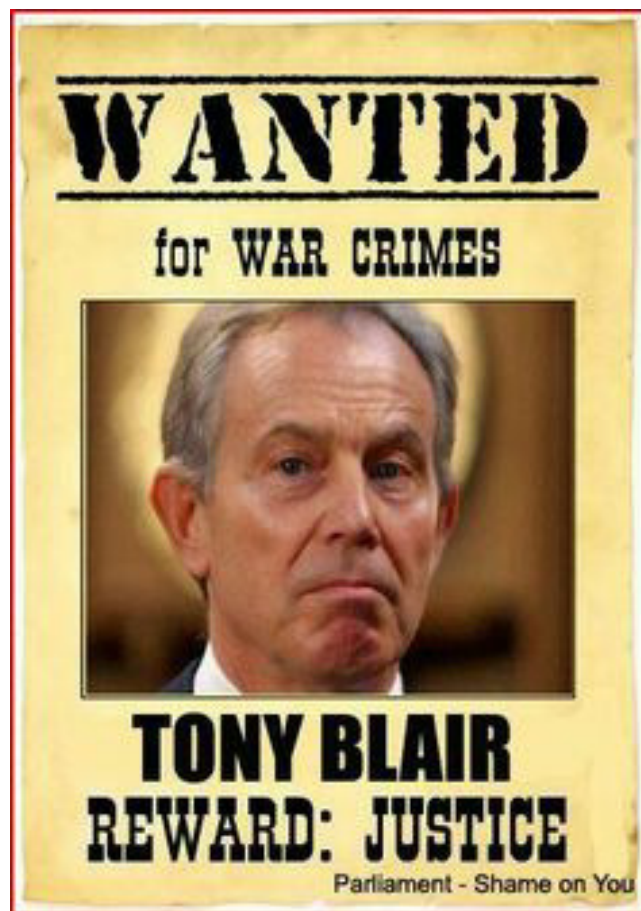

Our Prime Minister has condemned Russia for alleged chemical weapons use in Salisbury and has attacked Syria with missiles because of alleged use of chemical weapons by President Assad there. This foreign intervention has violated the sovereignty of Syria and the war has nothing to do with Britain. She says she is not motivated by regime change, but she has justified the attack because of (alleged) chemical weapons use and is prepared to do the same if it happens again. This is putting Britain in great danger as the conflict could thus escalate due to Russian and Iranian involvement there (China is also a potential ally of Russia).

The hypocrisy and the situation is made apparent when it is pointed out that Israel has used chemical weapons on the Palestinians during the Gaza War of 2008-2009 (Air burst White Phosphorus is classed as a chemical weapon). No action was taken by the "International Community" and certainly no missiles were fired by Britain or the USA at Israel.

There is more hypocrisy in the news lately regarding the Steven Lawrence commemoration. His parents had a seat awarded in the House of Lords and his murder is to be commemorated annually. Lee Rigby is not to be annually remembered or his family given a seat in the House of Lords, because he was white and not black. It appears that only Black Lives matter and White lives do not, to the anti-British liberal establishment. His skin was of the wrong colour and his murderers were not Whites but Muslims. The politicians of today are hell bent on destroying Britain by their lunatic domestic and foreign policies.

Yours Sincerely,

Milton Ellis (Newtown).
